

SURFACE RESONANCE

Show Dates: March 28 - April 22, 2016. Closing Reception: Thursday, April 14th, 7 to 9pm.

New York, NY – March 16, 2016 - FRONT art space is pleased to present the exhibition Surface Resonance. Surface Resonance is a solo exhibition by Feargal Cunningham, an artist based in Cork, Ireland. This is Mr. Cunningham's first show in the United States.

Surface Resonance is a series of five videos that capture the poetic and meditative discovery of reflected images on semi-polished floor surfaces. Mr. Cunningham slowly "paints" water onto the floor with wide brushes or mops. As the frame of the video fills with water, a carefully composed image slowly reveals. Mr. Cunningham's work challenges the known conventions of art: is this video art? performance? painting? The work in Surface Resonance is a delicate mixture of time, imagery and movement in which each of those components feed off each other's unique qualities to recontextualize, rediscover, and reimagine the world we inhabit.

For the last 25 years Mr. Cunningham has produced paintings, sculptures, and prints. Unsatisfied with the static nature of 2D work he embraced time-based media. Surface Resonance set in motion a new body of work that allowed Mr. Cunningham, to combine his mastery in painting with his scientific experimentation on reflection, movement, and time.

FRONT art space is in part a reaction to our location: we occupy a former sidewalk gift store. It contributes to the ongoing energy of city life. As an intimate space, also FRONT provides a moment of silence and reflection. FRONT's 2nd floor space, hosts larger group shows and artists receptions.

FRONT is a creative space where the visual arts can interact with and spill into the urban landscape of New York City; a space where new creative processes, concepts, and voices emerge.
